Ben Franklin

Lloyd Bridges

Over the next four months, five distinguished American actors portray the extraordinary Benjamin Franklin at different stages of his life.

Each characterization sheds a new light on Franklin's multi-faceted personality. And the composite yields a remarkable portrait of Franklin, the painter, the publisher, the author, the merchant, the philanthropist, the inventor, the politician, the diplomat.

They're all here. As vivid as life. This historic drama explodes with the wit, the compassion and the stirring rhetoric of an American giant.

BEN FRANKLIN.
The series begins this month.
Only on the Disney Channel.

July's American Jubilee

A Glorious Salute to Our Countrymen—
Past, Present and Future!

This month the Disney Channel gives you plenty to celebrate! July brings Independence Day, and with it events commemorating the origins of our nation. Return to the roots of America and meet a founding father: Benjamin Franklin. With "The Whirlwind" The Disney Channel begins a four-part series on Franklin, revered as a lover of liberty and defender of the rights of man.

In this opening program you'll watch young Ben's progress from print shop to the governor's office in Pennsylvania. And you'll venture to Great Britain, where Ben faces King George himself.

Over the next three months you'll accompany Ben to the halls of Congress, and watch him in action as he lays the foundations of American independence. You'll journey with him from New England to the court of Louis XIV, and follow deadly games of political intrigue. And finally you'll share the suspense with an aging Benjamin Franklin as he follows the state-by-state ratification of America's Constitution!

This is historical drama at its best...presented as a remarkable adventure...for that is how Ben Franklin lived his life, and how you will relive it.

Ever wonder where Ben got all his bright ideas? Learn the answer on MOUSETERPIECE THEATER when you visit Amos, an enterprising mouse if there ever was one. This little fella proudly lays claim to being the big cheese behind the great man. "Ben and Me" is an amusing twist to American history, and incidental to the fun is the historical information so cleverly imparted. This animated featurette is a pleasant accompaniment to your evening with Ben Franklin.

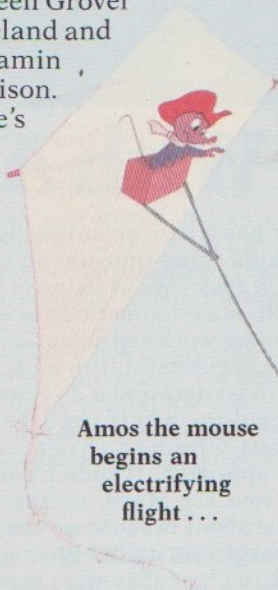

Feeling boastful? Swagger on over to the "Festival of Folk Heroes" where Pecos Bill, Johnny Appleseed, Paul Bunyan, Windwagon Smith and Casey At the Bat are represented in song and story. These larger-than-life characters celebrate American tall tales of strength, feats, recklessness and humor.

Ben Franklin (Eddie Albert) charms aristocrats at a celebration at Versailles

For wilderness trailblazers "Westward Ho the Wagons!" offers a scout's-eye view of the old frontier. Roll across the Oregon Trail with emigrant families heading for Northwest Territory in 1844. Of course no such trip is without peril, and the Sioux and Pawnees are ever-present threats.

If music is your beat, gather round and "pitch in" with "The One and Only, Genuine, Original Family Band." This star-spangled parade of patriotic entertainment takes 11 members of a musical family from Nebraska to Dakota Territory in the 1880s, during the Presidential race between Grover Cleveland and Benjamin Harrison. There's mirth and melody all the way.

If you march to a different drummer join "Johnny Shiloh," the boy-drummer who became the youngest of the Civil War's heroes. Johnny defied General Robert E. Lee's army at the battle of Shiloh, and saved his comrades from defeat. It's a true story of extraordinary valor.

Let "Pollyanna" take you to Harrington town in the 1900s, where her "glad game" melts the hard hearts and opens the narrow minds of some stubborn characters. There's magic in the air when Pollyanna's around, and it's catching. Play the glad game with her... it could change you, too!

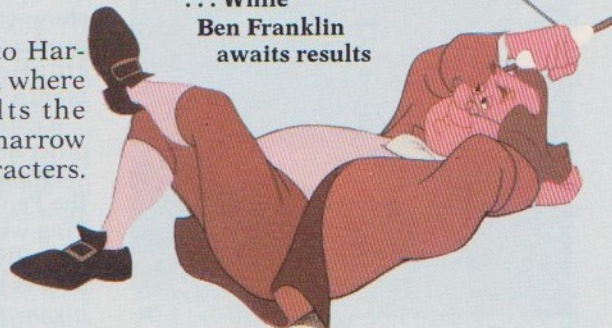

Skyrockets burst over The American Adventure in EPCOT Center

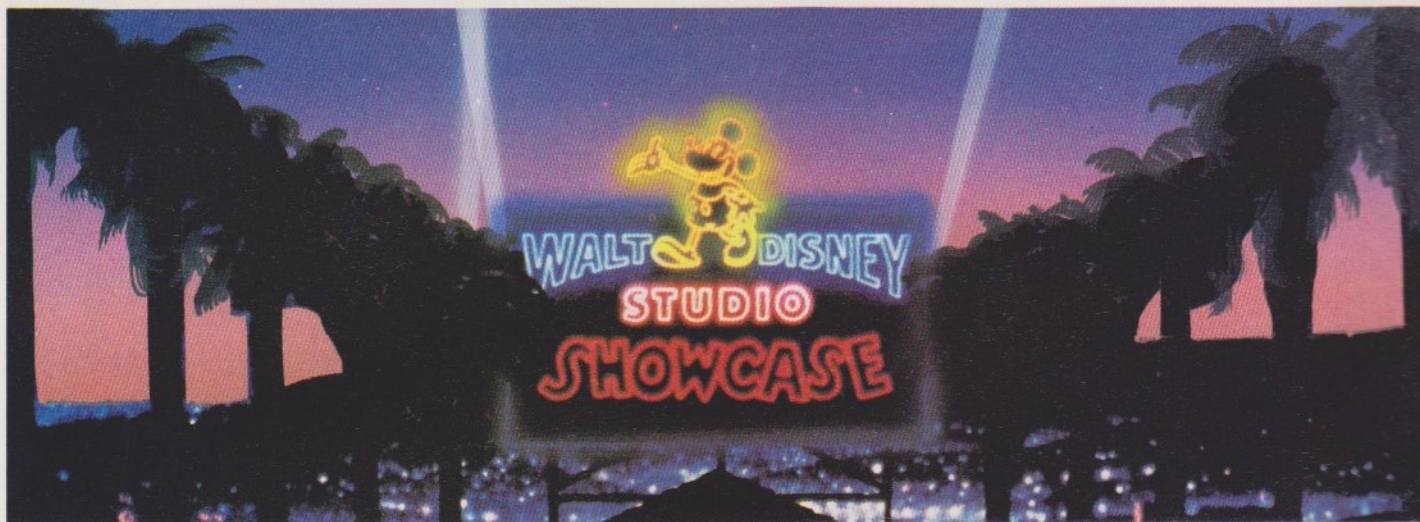

Join Lloyd Bridges, host of EPCOT AMERICA! AMERICA!, at EPCOT Center in Walt Disney World, Florida. He'll introduce you to noteworthy people, great and small, who are active in our changing times. He'll seat you with audiences in EPCOT Future Choice Theater, where you'll share in questions and answers that concern our tomorrows.

Creativity With A Purpose

The feature film makers at Walt Disney Studios have never been at a loss for ideas. And what they don't dream up themselves, they get from imaginative outsiders.

"We see a tremendous number of films and story lines that are exciting and original, but don't fit the conventional frame of production. It's also stuff the public would never have a chance to see in the usual course of events," says Chuck Richardson, one of six executives responsible for DISNEY STUDIO SHOWCASE. "So we proposed this series for The Disney Channel that would take advantage of such material."

There are no "typical" programs on the hour-length series.

"We go for oddball, innovative things.

Whatever has a new or unique look, a twist or something unusual about it," Richardson says. "We are always ready to take a chance on something new."

"Some ideas work and some don't. We tried an experimental film on science fiction with writers and a director who had never done anything like that before, but who had this terrific, maverick approach. It didn't pan out.

"How Toys are Made,' on the other hand, came about because we saw some funny, bizarre toys called Roving Eyes and wondered how they were made. So we got Ted Thomas, who had been in concept development on various Disney projects. He worked up an outline, and you'll see the result on the SHOWCASE this month.

"We were thinking about organizing a program about animation when Frank Thomas and Ollie Johnston, veteran Disney artists, came to us with an outline on that very subject. We signed Jerry Kramer, who'd done an animated show called 'Once Upon a Mouse,' as producer. You'll see it ("Animation Fascination") on the SHOWCASE this month, too."

Richardson and his colleagues have other hot projects cooking.

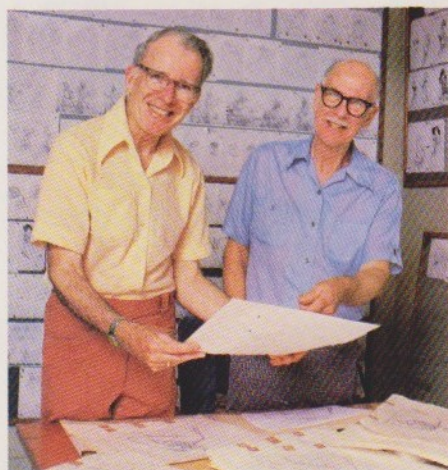

"We met a Chinese film student from the People's Republic named Wang Ya Ping who bought an old Cadillac and a 16-millimeter movie camera and drove across the United States, photographing people as he went along. Only a newcomer would pick the kind of people he did.

"So we acquired all that film and we're editing it into 'East Meets West,' a 60-minute show with Wang Ya Ping and William Least Heat Moon, the Indian who circled the country recording his observations and interviewing people.

Mickey Mouse leads a band of cartoon favorites in music-filled "Animation Fascination"

"Another future show is titled 'Difficult Learning.' It's offbeat, too, but with what we call creativity with a purpose. It's about dyslexia, a reading disability. We're getting important, accredited medical and physiological people involved in this one. It will have a lot of interactive stuff where Disney Channel viewers can test themselves with what they're shown on the TV screen." 🐭

CROSSING BRIDGES

Lloyd and Beau Bridges, father and son, star in “Benjamin Franklin: The Whirlwind,” first of a four-part series on the life of the peerless statesman. They have acted together before, and this is what they have to say about each other.

By Lloyd Bridges

I made a lot of westerns, and I used to let our kids—Beau, Cindy and Jeff—get into costume and appear in scenes. Beau was four when he got his first acting job, only it really wasn't acting. All he had to do was sit on a stile by a ranch house. He got five dollars for doing that. After the scene, his mother asked him what he was going to do with the five dollars. He said, “I'm going to give it to the poor.” She was touched, but didn't make any comment because he was only four years old. So then he looked up at her and said, “Isn't that a lovely thought?”

We laughed, but that was Beau. He was our first child, and as the others came along he was never jealous of them. There is great love in our family. Beau is a little older than Jeff, and has been a big help in getting him started on his career. There's no rivalry at all.

Actors have a lot of free time, and I always spent it with the kids. We all had fun together. I showed them how to fake fights and do some of the routines we stage for action pictures. I thought it was a very clever way of getting them acquainted with working in front of a camera, if that time should come. But Beau overdid it. He and a friend decided to frighten my wife by pretending to fight outside our home in Malibu. It worked so well that she ran out with a rolling pin, and went after the guy who was beating up Beau. She wouldn't speak to either of them for several hours after that.

Beau was always very much into athletics. He was on the basketball and baseball teams in school, and was touted by the Dodgers as a matter of fact. He really wanted to be a coach.

So I never tried to force Beau, or Jeff either for that matter, into acting, but the door was open if they cared to enter. I warned them that they had to cut the mustard or they wouldn't make it. They had to have the talent, the appetite, the desire.

Beau did a few of my shows with me, then other producers became aware of him and he was on his way. They never hired him because he was my son. It was because he turned in a good job.

By Beau Bridges

Some sons wouldn't want a celebrity for a father. They'd worry about being overshadowed, or whether they could live up to Dad's importance.

Not me.

I've always had a warm relationship with my father. Warm, but not always easy. He's a perfectionist, he demands a lot, and sometimes it's hard to please him. When I was 12 or so, I did something that really annoyed him. “All right, Beau,” he said. “I'm absolutely through with you. Do whatever you want. I don't care. I'm finished with you.” I went to my room and thought that over. Then I came out and faced him again. “I've got news for you, Dad,” I said. “You can't be through with me 'til I'm 21. It's against the law!” And we both started to laugh.

Sports consumed me while I was growing up, and Dad was my Little League coach as I'm coach for my kids now. I played third base, but one time he put me in as a relief pitcher in the last inning of a championship game when the score was 8-0 in our favor and the bases were loaded. I went in and walked nine players. Dad wouldn't take me out. I was mad as hay, but in retrospect I realize and admire what he did. He was teaching me something. He could have let me off the hook, but he kept me hanging in there. He'd been through the mill, he knew what it meant to stick with whatever you'd started. He was giving me experience—the hard way.

Dad did nothing to get me into his business of acting until it became obvious that I'd never be a career athlete. My fantasy of playing basketball at UCLA was just that, a fantasy. Those guys were over six feet tall, and I'm under that. So Dad offered me a couple of parts in his TV series, “Sea Hunt.” I was 17, and I could see that he was giving me an unusual opportunity. He had a great attitude toward his work, he enjoyed it, and it gave him a lot of satisfaction. I was encouraged by his example.

Dad taught me as much as he could about acting. He gave me a way of going at it, and in doing so he made the transition smooth from being my father-teacher to becoming my father-friend and co-worker. We have done a good many shows together, and I look forward to more. 🐭

101 POUNDS OF MOUSERCISE FUN

Next to a nice big breakfast of scrambled eggs and bacon with hot buttered toast, the best way of tempting the family out of bed in the morning is to tune in Kellyn Plasschaert.

Kellyn is the toothsome blonde instructor who puts the Mousercisers through their paces on MOUSERCISE. What she offers not only is appealing to the eye but splendid for the figure. A few workouts with Kellyn and that nice big breakfast begins to lose its charm.

Kellyn is Exhibit A in the case for physical fitness. At five-feet-five and 101 pounds, she generates more high voltage than the TVA.

"I've been a dancer for 11 years, so that's helped tremendously as far as tone and body structure goes," she says. "I exercise at home for 20 minutes every day. I'm athletic. My idea of fun is putting on my Adidas shorts and running out with my soccer ball to a field of grass."

Kellyn is the 24-year-old daughter of Alex Plasschaert, a choreographer and stunt man. He taught her the trade, and she often shows up in movies and TV performing acts of daring.

"I did all the demon work in 'Mausoleum,'" she says, citing a recent stunt assignment in a horror flick.

"It was heavy duty stuff.

Follow Me, Boys!

(Fred MacMurray, Vera Miles, Lillian Gish, Charlie Ruggles)

March along with a troop of mischievous, good-natured boys to the tune of a saxophonist turned piper.

The laughter and love start when Fred MacMurray as Lem Siddons, a traveling musician who's tired of big city life and small-time jobs, settles in Hickory, Illinois (pop. 4,951).

Seeking self-renewal and community acceptance, Lem volunteers to form a Boy Scout troop. He leads the lads on uproarious adventures, gains new values and insights, and gives direction and meaning to the town's young troublemaker.

In time, Lem wins the village belle for a bride and the love, respect and recognition he deserves.

Camping scenes and a hilarious sequence in which the troop outmaneuvers the military were filmed at Disney's Golden Oak ranch in Newhall, California.

I wore hideous demon make-up and bulbous capsules in my eyes. For one scene I had to fall through a second-story window, which wasn't easy because I couldn't see with those capsules in my eyes."

Kellyn is aiming for a career in talent management, which is less strenuous than tumbling out of windows or Mousercizing with a pack of peppy kids.

"Doing five shows in one shooting day is tough. And it's hard on my voice, because I strain to be heard over the music," she says.

"But the energy's there, and when the director is looking at you, and giving the countdown—5, 4, 3, 2, 1 and boom! you're on camera—something inside just turns on!"

BEN FRANKLIN: THE WHIRLWIND

(Lloyd Bridges, Beau Bridges, Susan Sarandon, Sheree North, Will Geer)

Begin the life story of Benjamin Franklin, a personal saga so big, so rich, so multi-faceted that it fills four spellbinding 90-minute programs. (Subsequent programs will run in August, September and October.)

"The Whirlwind" opens the series with an elderly Ben Franklin (Lloyd Bridges) reflecting on his past. Young Ben (Beau Bridges) is an apprenticed printer whose skills land him a position with the governor of Pennsylvania. Two years later he takes a wife (Susan Sarandon), in a marriage that gets off to a stormy, tragedy-marred start.

In the years that follow, Franklin discovers electricity and becomes Philadelphia's foremost champion of colonial unity. Finally he is appointed the colonies' representative to England, and, setting out to match wits with the king, leaves his wife and family behind.

"The Whirlwind" is a swiftly-moving chronicle distinguished by fine performances from an all-star cast and scrupulous attention to historical details.

(Hayley Mills, Jane Wyman, Richard Egan, Karl Malden, Nancy Olson)

Play the "glad game" with Pollyanna Whittier, whose boundless optimism charms an entire town!

Hayley Mills is Pollyanna, a sunny 12-year-old orphan who comes to live with her wealthy, stiff-backed Aunt Polly Harrington (Jane Wyman) in the 1900s.

Aunt Polly dominates the town of Harrington and the people who live there. Pollyanna, who always looks on the bright side, plays her "glad game" with everyone she meets. One by one their lives change for the better as Pollyanna proves that no matter how glum things appear to be, there is always something to be glad about.

The story of Pollyanna appeared first as a magazine serial, then as a book by Eleanor H. Porter in 1913. It was instantly popular and Pollyanna became a household word. Walt Disney used it as a vehicle to launch Hayley Mills' American film career.

Pollyanna and her pals are patriotic showstoppers

Hayley's Comet: Bright As Ever

At age 16, well into her career at Walt Disney Studios, Hayley Mills was receiving more fan mail than any other movie star in the world.

Today, fashionably attractive at 37, she is still reminded of those youthful years.

"I was in a shop just recently," she said. "I overheard two women talking

'There's Hayley Mills. My, how she's aged.' The Disney films were wonderful, but of course I'm no longer that little girl. But the image has clung and I suppose it always will."

Part of the reason for that is because after her six pictures for Disney, Hayley stopped making movies. Or at least reduced them to a trickle. She returned to her native England, made four or five films there, then went into acting in British television and stage productions. A generation passed before she was seen by American audiences again.

Meanwhile she interrupted her career to marry, divorce, and raise two sons. Crispian, 10, and Jason, 7, "go to a boys' preparatory school up the road," Hayley reported from her home outside London.

"This limits my work. I don't want to interrupt their education. I did enroll them in school in Nairobi for the months I was in Africa filming 'The Flame Trees of Thika' three years ago. It was a marvelous experience for them, but it still meant separation from their friends."

"The Flame Trees of Thika," a seven-part series seen on PBS' "Masterpiece Theatre" last year, and a guest appearance in "Disney Animation: The Illusion of Life" on NBC reacquainted American viewers with Hayley Mills. She'll be heard on radio as narrator of "When You Wish Upon a Star," a forthcoming series covering the 60-year history of Walt Disney Productions.

Mouseterpiece Theater

Scurry behind the scenes and discover how much Benjamin Franklin owes to a poor Philadelphia church mouse named Amos.

As a patriotic highlight this month, host George Plimpton presents "Ben and Me," an animated featurette adapted from a story by Robert Lawson. (July 4, 11, 23)

Amos is the inspirational genius behind Ben Franklin and his famous inventions. When Ben breaks his glasses, it's Amos who contrives the first bifocals. When Ben is stumped while designing his Franklin stove, Amos has the solution. And when Ben and Thomas Jefferson need an opening line for The Declaration of Independence, Amos provides it.

This funny footnote to the chronicles of mice and men is augmented by six special short cartoons and Plimpton's erudite commentary about them.

They are "Flying Mouse," "Window Cleaners," "Two Weeks Vacation," "Teachers Are People," "Early to Bed" and the Academy Award winning "Three Orphan Kittens." Exclusively on The Disney Channel—just for you!

PICK UP YOUR FEET: THE DOUBLE DUTCH SHOW

Sit still—if you can!—as you watch New York schoolgirls in acrobatic, gravity-defying, body-boggling jump-rope contests.

Winner of three Emmys, this fast half-hour film shows four-girl jump-rope teams in the annual Double Dutch Competition at Lincoln Center.

"Armed with only a pair of jump-ropes, they dance, hurtle metal bars, do splits and throw each other over their heads, all while the ropes are whistling under their feet," writes reporter Patrick Goldstein.

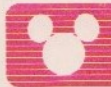

Meet the Dynamos, the Jumping Joints and the DD Tigers, and get acquainted with the personalities behind their dazzling footwork and amazing performances.

Watch the undefeated champs, the Fantastic Four, and find out how their leap to commercial television earned them national recognition, but cost them their amateur standing.

JOHNNY SHILOH

(Kevin Corcoran, Brian Keith, Darryl Hickman, Eddie Hodges)

Witness one of the Civil War's fiercest struggles and the gallant heroism of an 11-year-old drummer boy who may have turned the tide of history.

This is the little-known but true and compelling story of John Lincoln Clem, only a boy, yet a remarkably brave member of the Union army.

According to historians, Johnny stood his ground during the battle of Shiloh in 1862 and saved his comrades from defeat by General Robert E. Lee.

Shiloh was the biggest, hardest-fought battle in the nation's history up to that time. "Johnny Shiloh" recreates the event with careful attention to detail. Location scenes are faithful to original Civil War locales, and the military rolling stock includes caissons,

THE SCHEME OF THINGS

Host Mark Shaw mixes pyrotechnic potions.

Revel in a dazzling display of aerial beauty as THE SCHEME OF THINGS fills the sky with kites and fireworks.

Travel back in time to ancient China. There, about 1,000 B.C., gunpowder was discovered and the first kites may have been flown. You'll follow their use through the centuries on this imaginative factual program which pictures the world around us in an uncommon way.

The development of fireworks is shown from a simple explosion of black powder to the biggest single design ever created: a 2,000-foot wide flower in the skies over Japan.

Indulge in a fanciful feast of short films and featurettes you'll find only on The Disney Channel!

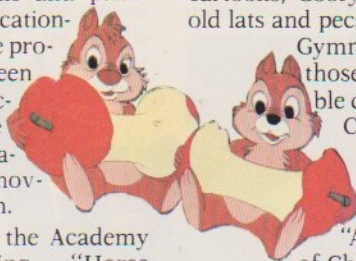

A special selection of colorful cartoons and prize-winning educational and nature programs has been chosen to accompany the Channel's feature-length movies this month.

Watch for the Academy Award-winning "Horse with the Flying Tail." This true story of Nautical, a golden palomino who conquers jumps with soaring ease to become an international champion, will enchant every member of your family.

Heading a cavalcade of cartoons, Goofy flexes the old lats and pecs in "Goofy Gymnastics" and those irrepressible chipmunks, Chip 'n Dale, are into more mischief in the "Adventures of Chip 'n' Dale."

Other notable shows include "America the Beautiful," a spectacular coast to coast tour of our great land, "One Day at Teton Marsh," "The Restless Sea," "Wild Geese Calling," "Aquamania" and "I'm No Fool in Water."

"The Boston Tea Party" recreates early events that shaped our nation. "America Works . . . America Sings" depicts the origination of folk songs that have enriched our history. Showing throughout the month.

LURE OF THE WILDERNESS

(Jean Peters, Jeffrey Hunter, Walter Brennan)

Prepare for danger, excitement and mystery in this drama about one man's struggle for justice in the deep South.

In the early 1900s, an innocent trapper finds himself convicted of murder in a Georgia courtroom. To escape a hangman's noose, he flees with his lovely young daughter to the murky depths of the Okefenokee swamps.

There they are discovered by a sympathetic hunter who befriends the older man and hires a lawyer to clear his name. But the trapper becomes a fugitive once more in a surprising turn of events.

DISNEY STUDIO —SHOWCASE—

How do they make them move? You'll get the answer to this and all the questions you ever wanted to ask about animated cartoons in "Animation Fascination," premiering July 12 on DISNEY STUDIO SHOWCASE. Frank Thomas and Ollie Johnston, who began their career as animation artists with Walt Disney in 1934, cover the subject from past to future.

Specs and Zoom

Toys, toys, toys! Let two comical, bug-eyed toys named Specs and Zoom take you back to their roots and show you how and where they came from. "How Toys are Made" premieres July 26 on this unpredictable, ever-entertaining series from Disney's feature film makers.

Showing throughout the month.

THE SHAGGY DOG

(Fred MacMurray,
Jean Hagen,
Tommy Kirk,
Kevin Corcoran)

Make way for the wildest talking-dog story ever told.

In this contemporary Disney comedy, a 17-year-old boy turns into a Bratislavian sheep dog with the disconcerting ability to talk.

None of his family is prepared for the fun that follows when the talking dog tangles with a couple of spies bent on rifling the files of a government missile plant.

Can the voluble pooch save the day?

Or if he opens his mouth, who'd believe him?

You and Me, Kid

It's fun and games for Sonny Melendrez and his guests

Turn your home into a playground, your television into a learning tool, with this interactive program that sets new precedents for parent and child participation.

Watch the show together and get going by "being" a kitten, a giraffe, a rocking boat or a spinning top in a snappy opening segment called "Let's Go!"

Follow host Sonny Melendrez through "Musical Motions" as he performs songs, hand-games and dances like "Yankee Doodle" and "Oh, Susanna!"

Make a human see-saw, become an ocean wave in "It Takes Two." Have fun by acting in the fairy tales shown on "You and Me Theater."

In "Famous and ½" watch celebrity guests like Harry Anderson and Rosemary Clooney relax at home with the special children in their lives. Then share a song, a smile and a cuddle with the special one in yours!

Turn to page 29 for more ideas, tips and activities.

Make YOU AND ME, KID part of your daily routine and find out how much fun two people can have—together!

ZORRO

(Guy Williams)

Out of the night comes the horseman known as Zorro!

Join this dashing Robin Hood of early California as he fights the rich who exploit the poor.

Follow his adventures in this daily series, starring Guy Williams in the title role and Gene Sheldon as his loyal companion Bernardo.

Mon.-Fri., 6:30 p.m.

CRYSTAL VOYAGER

(Music by Pink Floyd)

Plunge through crashing waves and sparkling crystal tunnels of water to the accompaniment of Pink Floyd's greatest hits.

Filmed entirely from a surfer's-eye view, "Crystal Voyager" puts you visually on a surfboard where you're suddenly riding a giant comber or whirling inside a shimmering "tube" of cascading foam. Pink Floyd's vibrant electronic sounds set the mood for George Greenough, matchless merman and surfer who takes you on his conquest of the waves.

Scenes inside the tubing breakers were photographed with a special high-speed, wide-lens camera, producing slow-motion close-ups of the critical moment when a surfer is locked in a wave's vortex.

If you've ever wondered how it feels to rollercoast through towering combers, join George Greenough in this wild, wet musical celebration of surfing.

WISH UPON A STAR

If you've ever had a favorite daydream (and who hasn't?) you'll share the wonder and delight these wide-eyed wishers feel. It's like a trip to the stars for them—and you're invited along for the ride!

This month you'll be swept off your feet along with a youngster who experiences the thrill of flying with "no strings (or machines) attached."

Then be on hand for the building and launching of a multi-colored, spinning star-shaped kite made by a girl who wanted to "create the most excellent kite in the world." You'll also soar over Los Angeles in the Goodyear blimp, and watch an enterprising fellow help design and coordinate a spectacular fireworks display at Dodger Stadium.

Candid "dreamer-on-the-street" interviews and stories about juvenile entrepreneurs will inspire you!

Fess Parker as a frontier doctor and Indian scout escorts pioneers on the Oregon Trail

Westward Ho the Wagons!

(Fess Parker, Kathleen Crowley, Jeff York)

Saddle up for adventure with a wagon train of families crossing the treacherous Oregon Trail in 1844.

Their perils begin when one of the children is stolen by Pawnees. Other dangers and hardships follow until the emigrants reach Fort Laramie, where a dramatic confrontation with the Sioux determines their fate.

Fess Parker of "Davy Crockett" fame plays the half-trained prairie doctor who literally holds their lives in his hands. Tommy Cole, Doreen Tracey, Cubby O'Brien and Karen Pendleton were recruited for juvenile leads from the original Mickey Mouse Club.

Watch your youngsters thrill to classic scenes from "Cinderella," "Sleeping Beauty" and "Peter Pan." Then prepare to be challenged by memory-tickling questions about those scenes. The stakes are high and you're in on the action as the red and blue teams compete for the biggest stack of Contraptiles.

This fast-paced game show will keep everyone guessing!

THE ONE AND ONLY, GENUINE, ORIGINAL FAMILY BAND

(Walter Brennan, Buddy Ebsen, Lesley Ann Warren, John Davidson, Janet Blair)

Meet the Bowers, a close-knit family of Dakota homesteaders and a first class family band to boot! Led by Grandpa, they take time away from raising crops to raise the roof with their music and raise Cain with their politics.

The fun begins when the 11 Bowers are invited to perform at both party conventions in the presidential battle between Grover Cleveland and Benjamin Harrison.

Grandpa, a hidebound Democrat, upsets a few apple carts at home and elsewhere when he locks horns with his eldest granddaughter's beau, a Republican newspaper publisher.

Political brickbats fly until election night, when the family gets in step again for a red, white and blue ending that gives everyone something to cheer about!

Boasting a dazzling cast of singers, dancers and actors, this zesty slice of Americana offers nine show-stopping songs by the Academy Award-winning Sherman brothers and a cameo appearance as "the giggling girl" by Goldie Hawn in one of her early film roles.

Lesley Ann Warren: A Disney Starlet Grows Up

Like many an actress who began as a child star at Walt Disney Studios, Lesley Ann Warren has a reply for what happened to her career there.

"I grew up," she said.

Lesley Ann was a long-legged, saucer-eyed teenager from the Broadway musical stage when Disney provided her with a movie debut in "The Happiest Millionaire." She went on to co-star in "The One and Only, Genuine, Original Family Band" as the horn-tooting daughter of a Dakota Territory homesteader. By then she was nearing 20, which put her over the hill for the kind of juvenile roles Disney handed out.

"So I left and went into TV spots," Lesley Ann said.

Lesley Ann Warren, an actress from childhood, is now a versatile and admired star

"Pretty soon I was doing mini-series, then movies for TV. The title role in 'Portrait of a Showgirl,' a made-for-television movie, led me back to pictures. It was the antithesis of the nice wholesome types I'd been playing, and it changed my image."

Lesley Ann's return to films in "Victor/Victoria" also brought her an Academy Award nomination and recognition as a versatile actress. You'll see her on the big screen this summer with Carrie Snodgrass and Christopher Atkins in "American Desire." She plays a romantically involved schoolteacher in a small Florida town.

Welcome To Pooh Corner

Give your children a gift of magical friendships and good times! Introduce them to lovable Pooh-Bear and his pals and watch the warmth begin.

They're ready and waiting to welcome young viewers on happy-go-lucky adventures in the Hundred Acre Wood. Here come bouncy Tigger, persnickety Rabbit, timid Piglet, talkative Owl, motherly Kanga, inquisitive Roo and gloomy old Eeyore—ready to enchant and entertain in lively episodes that also teach gentle lessons in living.

Young viewers will learn to respect others' privacy and property in "Piglet's Secret Place is Safe" and "Pooh Borrows Trouble." They'll hear upbeat, positive messages about liking themselves and caring for others in "Eeyore's Costume Party" and "Piglet Cares for a Carrot."

Each daily story adventure hums with playful tunes. And at Pooh's "Thoughtful Spot," children are challenged by thinking games and treated to sing-alongs! (A brand new game on page 23 provides pre-schoolers with hours of play designed to exercise their memory and reasoning skills.)

Rabbit serves lunch to Owl and Eeyore

Mon.-Fri., 8:30 a.m. & 3:30 p.m.

How We Do Pooh

The Hundred Acre Wood, happiest forest in the world, may seem as real to viewers as their own backyard, but it doesn't exist at all! A unique kind of "film magic" brings each of its delightful storybook settings to life.

Visits to Pooh's house, Rabbit's garden and Owl's treetop home are made possible by a sophisticated device called an "ultimate."

This advanced technical wizardry involves photographing the life-size puppet characters on a bare stage against a blue backing with only minor props and set pieces. The backgrounds, which in reality are either miniature sets or artist's paintings, are photographed separately. Then, through the magic of the ultimate, they are electronically blended together into a single picture.

"The ultimate is also the only piece of equipment capable of picking up the characters' shadows as they move and dance," says producer Frank Brandt. "This gives 'Welcome to Pooh Corner' its rich, three-dimensional quality."

It takes a total of four cameras to do a single scene using the ultimate process. "But," Brandt adds, "we wouldn't look one-third as good without it."

GUYS AND DOLLS

(Marlon Brando,
Jean Simmons,
Frank Sinatra,
Vivian Blaine)

Tap your toes to Samuel Goldwyn's lively version of the Broadway smash about two carefree gamblers who discover that all's fair in love and cards when they fall for two very different "dolls."

Along the way some interesting bets are made, won and lost in a film that's liberally sprinkled with colorful hard-boiled, soft-hearted characters, and hit songs including "Guys and Dolls," "Luck Be a Lady," and "Sit Down, You're Rockin' the Boat."

EPCOT MAGAZINE'S Own Frank Berry

"Collecting antiques probably saved my sanity," quips EPCOT Magazine's Great Ideas Tipster, Frank Berry. "As a comedian and cruise entertainment director, I've traveled a great deal, and I've often found myself in unfamiliar places with a great deal of time on my hands. So I began reading and collecting to pass the time. It's a wonderful way to get to know people. You have an instant rapport. I hated social studies as a child—all those dates and names—but collecting has made history real for me."

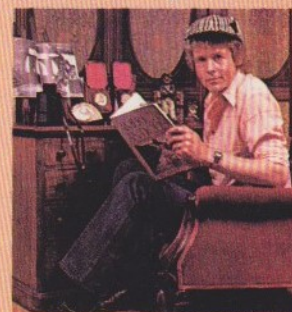

Frank, whose main rule of thumb for collecting seems to be "enjoy it," is also an equally enthusiastic cook. He dons a chef's hat as "The Three-Minute Gourmet" on EPCOT Magazine to share recipes and some off-beat ideas like this one for perfectly poached fish: wrap fish tightly in foil and run through one complete dishwasher cycle. (One cycle for every 1½ pounds.)

But he's most excited about the segments on antiques. "I've never enjoyed myself more," he says. "I love getting other people interested in collecting. I've even got the camera crews running around talking dates and periods and styles!"

Frank's specialty is antique silver, although he collects and enjoys everything from Staffordshire pottery to jewelry. "I encourage people to specialize when they start out," he states. "I also tell them, if you want to be a serious collector you must be ready to stand by your mistakes."

"What I've tried to do on the program is stress the interest over investment. You should never buy something unless you like it. I always ask myself: 'Do I really want it, or can I live without it?' The object mustn't become a fixation, or all the fun's gone!"

MICKEY'S Just for Kids SECTION

Hi there!

July is one of my favorite months! Know why? Because it's when we celebrate our country's birthday!

This July, The Disney Channel is celebrating all month long with programs and movies about famous Americans, favorite folk heroes, exciting times in our history, and the people who make this a wonderful place to live today!

And in "Just for Kids" you'll find enough sparkling ideas to light up every day of the month! It's your own special section and it's designed for fun!

You can learn to build a kite, make your own musical instruments, and even tickle your funny bone writing a comic strip joke!

Come on along with The Disney Channel for a month long festival of entertainment that's as exciting as picnics, carnivals and fireworks all rolled into one!

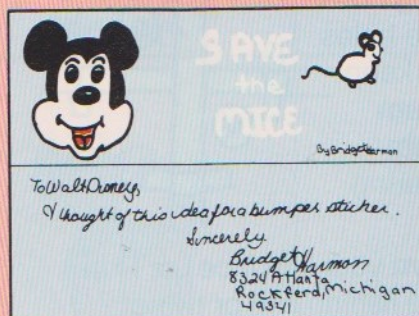

Your Pal,

MICKEY MOUSE

"LET'S GO FLY A KITE!"

This month you'll meet Ben Franklin (probably the world's most famous kite-flyer), and watch one wishful thinker build the kite of her dreams on WISH UPON A STAR. Here's a pattern for your own easy-to-fly diamond kite. Have fun building it—and happy soaring!

YOU'LL NEED:

1 sheet of strong, lightweight paper (24" wide by 30" long) or a plastic trash bag.

2 pine or balsa strips or $\frac{1}{8}$ " thick dowels (24" long and 30" long). (Dowels are smooth, rounded sticks. You can find them in hardware stores.)

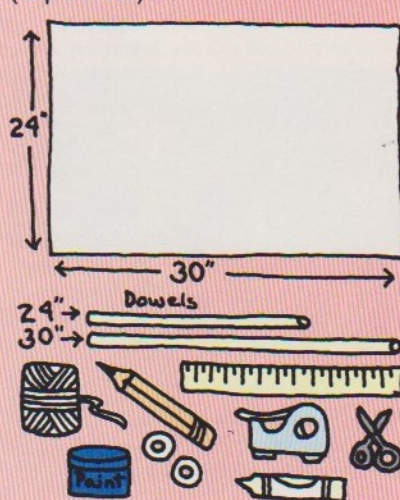

Fishing line or sturdy cotton twine.

Package sealing tape.

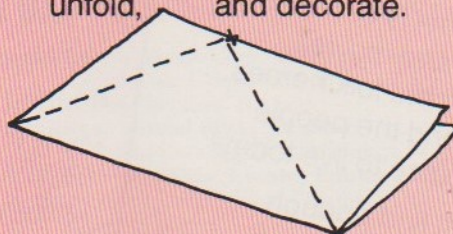

Scissors, pencil, measuring stick, decorating materials.

Paper reinforcement rings. (Optional)

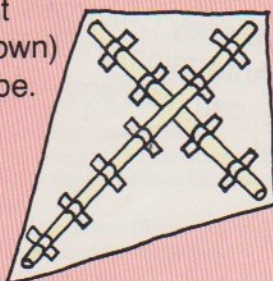

Package sealing tape.

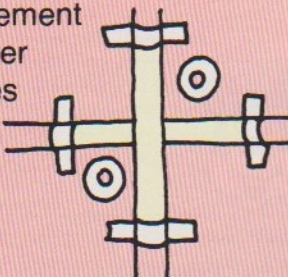

1. Fold the paper or plastic in half lengthwise. Make a mark 8 inches from one end of the paper on the side opposite the fold. Draw a straight line from this mark to each of the opposite corners. Cut out, unfold, and decorate.

2. Turn the paper over and tape the 30" dowel along the center fold.
3. Lay the 24" dowel across the kite from point to point (as shown) and tape.

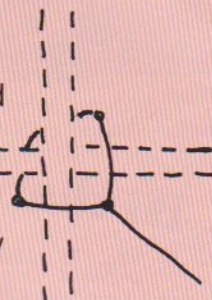

4. Punch holes where the two sticks cross. Put reinforcement rings over the holes to keep them from tearing.

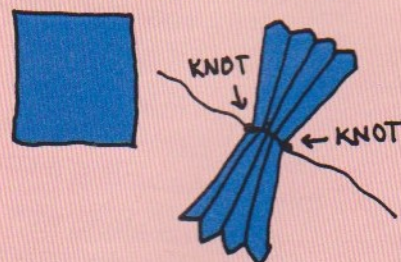

5. Turn your kite face up. Run the fishing line or twine through one hole, under the sticks and out the other hole. Knot the line tightly in front.

6. Cut ten, 8 inch squares of paper. Pleat them. Run a heavy string through the center of each pleated "bow." Knot the string above and below each "bow." Fasten the string to the bottom of your kite.

7. You're ready to fly! But remember these important safety rules:
Use non-metallic materials.
Fly kites in sunny weather.
Fly kites away from power lines, telephone lines, transmission towers, roads and highways.
If your kite gets caught on wires, a roof or tree—leave it there and have fun making a new one!

DIRECTIONS: There are lots of ways to play with POOH SQUARES! Ask Mom or Dad to help you cut them out and show you how to use them.

GAME ONE Line up several pictures. Look at them. Close your eyes and have someone remove one. Which is missing?

GAME TWO Match each object to the character it reminds you of the most.

GAME THREE Match identical characters and identical objects. Match objects with similar characteristics.

GAME FOUR Place squares in rows of four with either all the characters or all the objects facing up. First player turns over two squares. If they match, player keeps them. If they don't match, turn them face down again. Continue until all the squares are taken. Player with the most matching squares wins the game!

Ye Olde Printe Shoppe

Create your own greeting cards, placemats, stationery or even wrapping paper.

You'll need: Red, blue and yellow liquid tempera or poster paint; old plates, aluminum pie tins or plastic meat trays; lots of paper towels;

★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★
newspaper; plain paper to print on; an assortment of vegetables, or other objects.

Directions:

1. Cut vegetables in half and let them dry.
 2. Fold six paper towels and put them on a plate. Thin your paint with a little water (not too runny) and pour onto towels. Let the paint soak in for ten minutes.
 3. Spread newspaper on the table. Cover with a layer of paper towels. Place the paper you're going to print on this surface.
 4. Press the cut side of the vegetable onto your paint pad, lift, then carefully press it onto the paper.
 5. Repeat the design with another color or alternate with another vegetable. (Overlapping red, blue and yellow will give you orange, green and purple.)
 6. Try other objects like fresh leaves, bark, pine cones, sponges, bottle caps, string, or bits of lace.

THE ONE AND ONLY, GENUINE, ORIGINAL FAMILY BAND
 July 2, 4, 9, 11, 14, 17, 19, 22, 28, 30

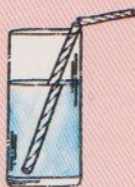

HOMEMADE HARMONY!

Put together a family band by building the instruments on this page. (You might even invent a few yourself.) Then have fun creating your own homemade harmonies!

STRAW TROMBONE

Cut a soda straw as shown above. Put the longer end in a glass of water and blow gently through the shorter end. (If you need to, lightly pinch the short end of the straw where it joins the part that goes in the water.) While blowing, raise and lower the glass of water. With practice you can play a simple tune.

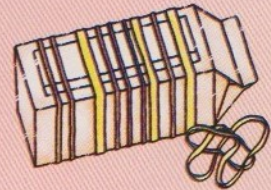

SODA BOTTLE SAXOPHONE

Fill eight soda bottles with different amounts of water. Arrange the bottles in a row with the most water at one end, and the least full at the other. Blow across the top. Add or take away water until you have a complete musical scale.

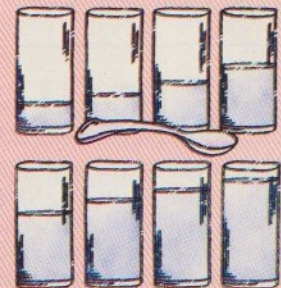

WOODEN XYLOPHONE

Lay eight strips of wood (or wooden blocks) of different lengths across two tubes of rolled newspaper. (Use rubber bands to keep the papers rolled up.) Strike the blocks in the center with a wooden spoon.

RUBBERBAND BANJO

Use a shoebox or cut a milk carton in half lengthwise. Put eight rubber bands around the box, spacing them an equal distance apart. Pull down on the sides of the rubber bands to tighten the section across the box opening and make high notes. Pull up on the sides of the rubber bands to loosen the section across the opening and make low notes. (Use different sizes and thicknesses of rubber bands to get different tones.)

WATER GLASS PIANO

Line up eight glasses filled with different amounts of water and gently tap them with a spoon to get a variety of clear, light tones.

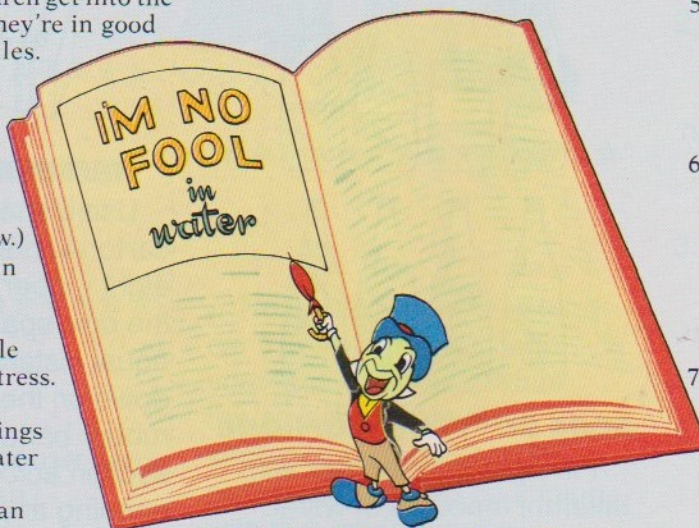

GET INVOLVED with The Disney Channel programs through the special activities on the next 5 pages!

SUMMERTIME AND THE SWIMMING IS EASY!

Before you and your children get into the swim of things, be sure they're in good shape on basic safety rules.

Watch "I'm No Fool in Water" after "Follow Me, Boys!" then take this quiz together. (Note: On some questions, there's more than one correct answer. See answers below.)

Table Talk...

Many of the programs and movies you'll see this month on The Disney Channel provide a remarkable catalyst for family communication. Watch "Follow Me, Boys!," the heartwarming story of a man who finds self-renewal as he shapes the lives of his young scouts, and "Pollyanna," the classic tale of an orphaned girl who teaches a whole town how to be glad again. Then start your family sharing their thoughts and feelings with these suggested questions.

"Follow Me, Boys!"

See Where These Questions Lead.

- 1) Why did Whitey feel out of place with the other boys? What can people do to overcome such feelings?
- 2) What would you do to help welcome a new person to your school or neighborhood? What would you want someone to do for you?
- 3) If you were Whitey's friend, what advice would you give him and the other boys?
- 4) Sometimes people need to be alone for a while. Can you come up with an "all-family" signal to use when you'd like some privacy?

"Pollyanna"

Think Positively And Speak Up!

- 1) Think of all the positive words you can. Make a list. Try using only positive words for one whole day.
- 2) Practice Pollyanna's "glad game." Have everyone tell what makes them happiest. Keep track of what makes you glad for one whole day.
- 3) Give an example of a situation in your life that you could improve right now using positive thinking.
- 4) Do you know someone who needs to see the bright side of things? What could you do or say to help?

YOU AND ME, KID is filled with material for active sharing while the television is on, and for use after each program ends. Here are a few simple suggestions for expanding television's benefits into your child's life beyond the TV screen.

- Choose an exercise you did together while watching YOU AND ME, KID and try it later in the day.
- Practice making faces in a mirror. Invent new expressions. Draw a big funny face and turn it into a paper mask.
- Visit the library and find a story you saw acted out on YOU AND ME, KID. Read the story and discuss it.
- Learn the songs on YOU AND ME, KID and use them to help pass the time on long drives or while running errands.
- Turn your home into an "Exploratory." When the host and guests on YOU AND ME, KID explore the

Vicki Lawrence and son

YOU & ME, KID will bring you and your family closer together

LET'S GO!

This lively one-minute warm-up starts the ball rolling on YOU AND ME, KID. Once you've learned the routine, you can enjoy it anywhere and to any music! Ready, set — LET'S GO!

(Perform to any lively tune!)

- March in place (8 times)
- March with legs apart (4 times)
- March with legs together (4 times)
- Run in place (4 times)
- Jump in place (4 times)
- Bounce at the knees and swing arms forward and back (2 times each way)
- Reach up and circle arms out to the side (2 times)

- Left arm reaches up, right arm reaches up (2 times each)
- Bend at waist; left arm reaches forward, right arm forward (2 times each)
- Pat ankles, knees, legs and tummies (to a count of 4)
- Hold hands and sway side to side (4 times)
- Arms up, circle upper bodies around (2 times)
- Twist away from each other, twist toward each other and clap hands together (3 times)
- Parent holds child's hand and twirls child around under parent's outstretched arms (1 twirl) sensation of touch, find some interesting objects around the house like a feather, piece of velvet, or cellophane. For the sense of smell, put dabs of things like peanut butter, toothpaste, or vanilla on a paper plate and try to identify with your eyes closed. For sight, play a color or shape recognition game by choosing an object and having your child discover what it is by guessing colors and shapes. For sound, explore the house for different or unusual sounds (a clock ticking, a squeaky door, the sound of an egg beater, etc.).

- Turn on the radio or record player and dance. Freeze like a statue when the music stops, or just enjoy moving to different rhythms.

TV-wise parents will also: Limit a child's television viewing time; select programs which are age-appropriate, and take time to watch and discuss programs with their children. Remember, television can be a wonderful tool for learning and increased family involvement—if you are in control!

Exploring the Archives

Dave Smith, who heads the Walt Disney Archives, has the facts on all things Disney. The Archives, located at the Disney Studio in Burbank, was formed in 1970 to collect and preserve everything related to Disney history and to make it available for research.

Letters concerning the company's 60-year history are handled by the Archives.

Sterling Holloway was a familiar voice in many Disney films. What's he doing now?—S.S.O. and F.O., Dearborn Heights, Mich.

Holloway, 78, is retired and living in Laguna Beach, Calif. His distinct and recognizable voice was first used by Walt Disney as the stork in "Dumbo" way back in 1941.

The quality of the voice was such that Disney animators loved working with it. So Holloway gave further performances during the next four decades, including Flower the Skunk in "Bambi," the Cheshire Cat in "Alice in Wonderland," Kaa the snake in "The Jungle Book," Amos the mouse who befriended Ben Franklin in "Ben and Me" (shown this month on MOUSETERPIECE THEATER), Roquefort the mouse in "The Aristocats," and Pooh in "Winnie the Pooh."

There is probably no other actor in Hollywood who is as well-known by his voice alone.

What was the name of Zorro's horse?—D.D., Carmel, Calif.

This is a frequently asked question, and the answer is "Tornado."

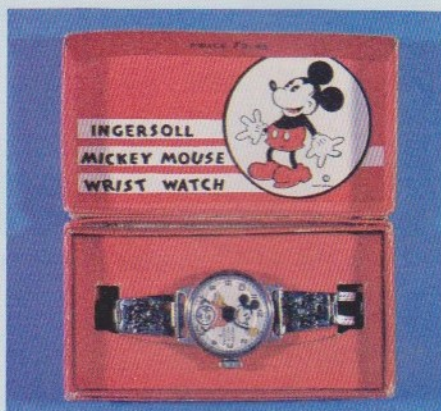

Zorro, gallant defender of the poor and scourge of military tyrants in Spanish California, originally slashed his ragged "Z" symbol for television audiences on October 10, 1957. The popular Disney TV series starring Guy Williams as the swashbuckling hero aired for two seasons, a total of 78 episodes.

Now let me ask you a question. Douglas Fairbanks Sr. and Tyrone Power were two of the stars who played Zorro on the movie screen. How many more can you name? (See Answer To Right)

DID YOU KNOW THAT...

...When searching for homes most closely resembling architecture in the eastern United States during the early 1900s for "Pollyanna" (shown this month on The Disney Channel), Walt Disney had to go far afield from his Burbank, Calif., Studio.

It was in Santa Rosa, in the famed Napa Valley, that an ideal house was found to serve as the film residence of Pollyanna's Aunt Polly Harrington (Jane Wyman). The chosen house occupied a full block in the center of town, and was surrounded by spacious lawns and gardens. It was built in 1877 as a replica of an old Natchez, Mississippi antebellum house.

DISNEY TRIVIA FOR JULY...

...Among the Bower children in "The One and Only, Genuine, Original Family Band" look for young Jon Walmsley, best known later for his role as Jason Walton in "The Waltons."

...Kevin Corcoran, who starred as "Johnny Shiloh" while a young boy in 1963 and earlier as Moochie in "Moochie of the Little League," is now a producer at the Disney Studio.

...This year is the 50th anniversary of the first Mickey Mouse watch.

Readers who have Disney-related questions can write to Dave Smith, c/o The Disney Channel Magazine, 4111 W. Alameda Avenue, Burbank, CA 91505.

Robert Livingston ("The Bold Caballero"), John Carroll ("Zorro Rides Again"), Reed Hadley ("Zorro's Fighting Legion"), Clayton Moore ("Ghost of Zorro"), Guy Williams ("The Sign of Zorro"), Gordon Scott ("Zorro and the Three Musketeers"), George Hamilton ("Zorro the Gay Blade"), Walter Chert ("Sign of Zorro"), Frank Latimore ("Shadow of Zorro"), Pierre Brice ("Zorro vs. Maciste"), George Ardisson ("Zorro at the Court of Spain"), Alain Delon ("Zorro"), Guy Stockwell ("The Three Swords of Zorro"), George Turner ("Son of Zorro").
